Fox at Night: My First Can Read is a delightful children's book by Edward Marshall. It tells the story of a fox who goes out at night to hunt for food. The book is written in simple language and has colorful illustrations, making it perfect for young readers.

The story begins as the sun sets and the moon rises. A fox emerges from its den, ready to hunt for food. The fox walks through the forest, looking for something to eat. He sniffs the ground and listens for any sounds of prey.

The fox comes across a mouse, a rabbit, and a bird. However, the fox is too slow to catch any of them. He is about to give up when he hears a noise in the bushes. He investigates and finds a family of mice. The fox pounces on the mice and eats them.

The fox is full and happy. He returns to his den and goes to sleep. As he sleeps, he dreams of all the food he will eat the next night.

Fox at Night: My First Can Read is a charming tale that will appeal to young readers. The story is simple and easy to follow, and the illustrations are bright and colorful. The book is perfect for bedtime reading or for reading aloud to a group of children.
