The St. Mary Rebels were founded in 2010 by four young women who met at St. Mary's School, an exclusive all-girls school in New York City. The four women were all brilliant students and talented athletes, but they were also bored with the school's strict rules and regulations. They decided to form a gang as a way to rebel against the school and to have some fun.

The St. Mary Rebels quickly became known for their crimes. They robbed banks, stole cars, and even kidnapped people. They were also known for their violence. They were not afraid to use their fists or their weapons to get what they wanted.

In addition to their crimes, the St. Mary Rebels were also known for their fashion. They loved to wear designer clothes and accessories. They were also known for their unique sense of style. They often wore their hair in elaborate updos and wore makeup that was both glamorous and edgy.

The St. Mary Rebels were eventually arrested and convicted of their crimes. They were sentenced to long prison terms. However, they remain a popular figure in the world of crime and fashion.

The Members of the St. Mary Rebels

The St. Mary Rebels are made up of four young women:
