Things to Know

Each book in the "Things to Know and Things to Do: Discover Nature" series starts with a section called "Things to Know." This section provides basic information about the topic of the book. For example, the book on animals includes information about different types of animals, their habitats, and their behavior. The book on plants includes information about different types of plants, their life cycles, and their uses. The book on weather includes information about different types of weather, how they are formed, and how they affect the environment.

Things to Do

After the "Things to Know" section, each book in the "Things to Know and Things to Do: Discover Nature" series includes a section called "Things to Do." This section provides hands-on activities that readers can do to learn more about the topic of the book. For example, the book on animals includes activities such as making a bird feeder, going on a nature walk, and observing animals in their natural habitat. The book on plants includes activities such as planting a garden, making a terrarium, and identifying different types of plants. The book on weather includes activities such as making a weather vane, tracking the weather, and making a weather forecast.
